Recording video lessons is not just about companies that work with education. Many people are looking for good apps to make their records at home to start their online course through the EAD platform. Even in increasingly modern smartphones, the idea is that it can be saved from these devices. No need to invest in the camera. The truth is that the Internet has sponsored recording recording a much faster and more practical way to communicate with the target audience. Along with this trend, you need to find an app to record videos that match your need. You might be wondering: but my phone already has a good camera. So why should I invest in the app to record videos? Simple so that the program can help your video win even more professional quality and appearance. Video record app: Choose the best for youAlso, whether you want to record videos as an entertainment form or create your own business, now know 13 app options to record a video you should try:1 - FILMIC ProAvailable for both iOS and Android. An application to record FILMIC Pro videos is paid but lives up to its price. It is considered one of the best available on the market. Allows you to make recordings as if using a professional camera. You'll be able to record manual, slow motion, and other effects that failed with your phone's basic camera settings. The video quality produced is also much higher, which compensates for the investment in the app.2 - SuprōWho likes to record videos with different effects, will want to use Suprō. The program works as if there were an 8 mm camera in your hands. Black and white, yellowish, dusty, and even grainy are some of the effects that can be applied after filming or filming. The app is paid for and available on both iOS and Android.3 - Open CameraAlthough is available only for Android phones, video recorder is free. It has features that will please both those who start recording and those who already have more experience. It also has the function to record HD videos and features similar to the manual function of a professional camera, such as focus modes, scene modes, white balance and ISO.4 - Videocam IllusionAvailable only for Android, the free app is a great option for those who like to try various filters when recording their videos, and not just during editing. An excellent highlight of the app is to allow the user to test the filters while still making a recording, as well as an automatic focus that supports the quality of the video even when working with lower resolutions.5 - JB + camera The program is only available for Android and is paid. Nevertheless, it is worth investing money, because it has several features to make your videos even more interesting. Those who have a camera device that supports 4K recording can use this feature in this app to record videos. In addition, it also has several effects and filters that can be applied.6 - Lapse ItYou likes to make videos using a time interval technique that mixes photos and videos at different intervals, then you have been asked. Because it allows you to record videos that work with this technique. It also allows you to record videos in full HD. Available for free use on Android and iOS.7 - SloProThe free app is available on both Android and iOS and is suitable for those who want to twitch video speed. The focus of the app is slow movement, but there is an opportunity to switch between slow movement and fast movement, making the video even more interesting and fun. Ideal for those who want to show what is best viewed in slow motion, and then usually follow the video.8 - CollaDespite for use on Windows or Mac computers, Colla also has an iPad version. Allows you to record videos and share a link over social networks. The free version doesn't allow you to record very long videos, but there are some options for paid plans that fit in your pocket and will be worth the investment. The screen recorder creates videos directly from your iPad or computer and also allows you to use your webcam. This is an interesting tip for those who start and want to easily share a video link.9 - FXGuruYour goal is to work with themes of video or even make the clip shot? FXGuru can be a good choice. The app is free and is available on iOS and Android, allowing HD recording and insertion of effects similar to films of different styles, such as terror, action and science fiction. Those who want to create daredevy videos can also use the app because HD recording improves the quality of recorded things.10 - Video show - Video Editor & MakerUse is free and allows not only to record, but also to edit videos. It's easy to use and has several tools to customize your post. Music, filters, subtiles, and even effects like Snapchat can be used. A great highlight of the program is that it allows you to record videos without time limits, perfect for those who want to make longer shots without separating them in several parts. It also allows you to edit and compress the video to make it easier.11 - Urakram ProAvailable only for iOS, the program is one of the most desirable for those who want high quality and professional work in their videos. Despite being paid, it makes the footage look much better than with the camera's local app. It also has a differentiated effect, such as time span and slow movement. The resolutions that can be recorded are also higher than Full HD. Cinemagram can be a good choice. Available on iOS, the app is paid and ideal for those who like to use creativity time to make a short video. It has several effects that give a different connection to what was filmed. Much like with photos on Instagram, so much so that Cinemagram can store videos on Instagram.13 - hyper lapse Time l app, available on iOS, allows you to mess with the speed of your videos. It is ideal for those who like to speed up images or even slow down recording. The app has 4 different speeds and also offers several filtering options.
